

THE ESMO 2014 cLIVE WEBCAST

cLive digitally records lectures/presentations in a session room and automatically creates several output formats to display the content online. cLive synchronizes the speaker's voice, the speaker's video automatically, (talking head if recorded) together with the speaker's presentation material. The created content can be made available online as audio-, web- and pod- casts. Depending on the defined settings, users can view the audio version of a web cast with or without a photo of the speaker or view the complete web cast including the talking head. cLive also automatically indexes the slides and creates thumbnails when changing from one slide to the next. This feature gives the viewer a complete navigation of the presentation and allows viewers to jump directly to any desired part of a talk.

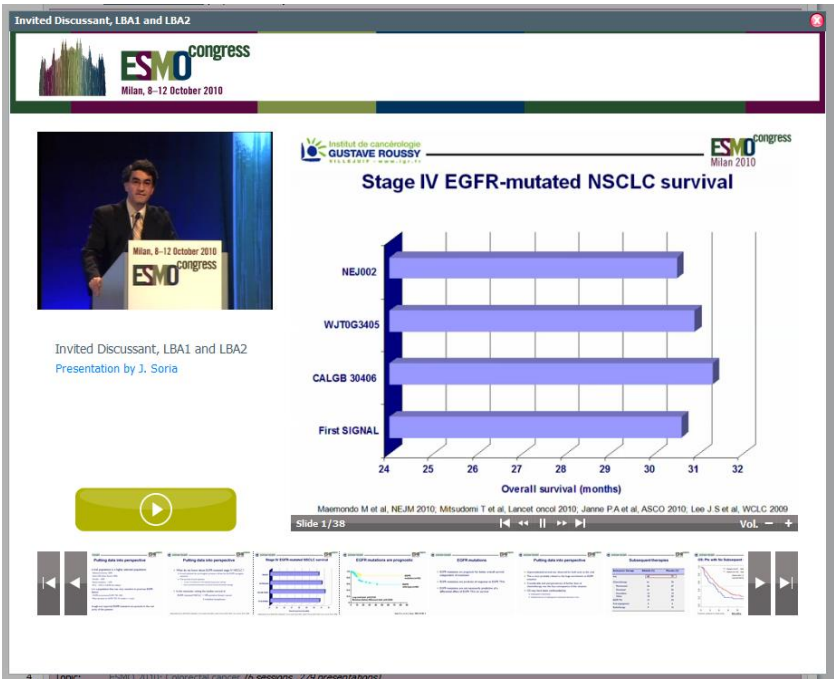

All animations, videos and even moving the mouse on screen is displayed as shown during the event. Security is a key element of cLive. All files are integrated into formats preventing misuse of recorded material. cLive is easy to install on onsite computers, easy to handle onsite and cost effective. You do not need any additional hardware in the session rooms. Depending on the choice of turnover time which can be made available in less than 24 hours, we provide the necessary hardware for conversion of files. Determined by your budget, you can select different cLive formats, namely cLive audio capture, audio only and cLive video capture, including talking head.

SYSTEM DESCRIPTION

The cLive Webcast makes it possible to record presentations and place them online together with presentation documents in complete form. In this way presentations can be delivered to give the users the feeling that they are on location. The slide window, speaker video, text window and slide overview are linked via the content – this allows quick, totally free navigation throughout the entire presentation.

A presentation can be started using a standard internet browser; no additional software is needed. In order to get a general overview of all available presentations, the user can browse the meeting summary website and choose the presentation in which he/she is most interested. Once a presentation has been decided upon, the presentation can be viewed or another can be quickly and directly chosen using the overview.

The speaker video is edited for this purpose and synchronized to the presentation in such a way that sound and video run precisely with the corresponding text in each individual slide. If regulations allow, entire presentations or additional presentation documents (Book of Abstracts, etc.) can be downloaded directly over the optional download function integrated into the presentation window or overview page.

Additional benefits for our customers:

- The appearance of cLive can be configured individually according to your corporate identity
- When the system is hosted on Webges servers, it is possible to compile statistical data per user / presentation or for other categories
- All copyrights stay with the organizer or presenter, as the case may be.
- All presentations and audio files are imbedded in such a way that they cannot be downloaded unless so desired.
- Our standard procedure is to host files on our servers to ensure the above-listed statistical evaluations and for optimized transfer rate.
- CD/DVD format is of also available.
