FINAL REPORT

Home Institute: Dr. Carrillo Regional Hospital
Host Institute: Vall D'Hebron University Hospital

Introduction

As a clinical oncologist, I felt that I should have more knowledge in palliative care to accompany the patient and their family in all stages of cancer.

Goals or aims

incorporate theoretical knowledge of palliative care observe the multidisciplinary work of the support unit solve clinical cases on palliative care in the office and in the internment room

Description of the time spent at host institute

This institution is one of the largest in Spain and Europe, the hospital is highly complex and the palliative care unit works daily with all related specialties, oncology, radiotherapy, hematology, medical clinic, anesthesia, emergency service, etc. They carry out research work, clinical conferences, participate in the organization of palliative care conferences and conferences, and publish chapters of books on palliative care.

Conclusion

I discovered that it is a branch of oncology that I am interested in developing in my hospital, creating a palliative care area and also incorporating a subject into the study plan of the medical career so that future doctors have the basic knowledge of this specialty
